Outlook

According to the Alberta Occupational Demand and Supply Outlook (2006-2016), the province may expect a supply shortage of managers in public administration every year between 2007 and 2016, which will become a challenge as more employees reach retirement age. The use of contractors to reduce costs and provide access to specialized expertise continues to be a growing trend in government services.

The Public Administration industry, like many other industries, will be impacted by an aging workforce and the competition of more lucrative opportunities. The industry faces many challenges in attracting and retaining talent within Alberta's tight labour market. Sizeable salaries in other Alberta industries attract workers to the private sector. This creates challenges within the public service to retain high-quality staff.

For Police officer and fire-fighter occupations, the Alberta Occupational Demand and Supply Outlook (2006-2016), projects a supply surplus of workers for every year between 2007 and 2016. However, amid the hot Alberta economy, many urban and rural communities now find themselves with a decreasing number of individuals applying to become fire-fighters due to alternative opportunities in the province.
